JOHN DOLBEARE WHITE JOHN REYNOLDS, JR. HATHERLY FOSTER, JR. To the Members of the Class of 1907:

This first report of the Class of 1907, I beg to submit to you with the hope that it will prove an interesting record of our college course and a useful guide in following our classmates during the past year. In its preparation I can assure you that I have taken all reasonable pains to make it both accurate and complete. That I have partially failed in the latter respect you will probably note as you read the report. I wish to thank, however, the many classmates who have given faithfully and promptly the information sought, and those also who have gladly aided me in many of the smaller details of its preparation. Of the delinquents who have neglected to answer all appeals for information, I can only ask a better response in the future.

I am especially grateful to the College Office, the university papers, and the officers of various clubs and organizations for their universal courtesy in allowing me the use of records necessary for the compilation of this report. To Dr. George A. Gordon am I indebted for the manuscript of our Baccalaureate Sermon, which is printed herewith in full

J. M. MORSE, Secretary.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON TO THE CLASS OF 1907

BACCALAUREATE SERMON

REMEMBERED WISDOM.

By George A. Gordon.

"And I remembered the word of the Lord."—Acts 11, 16. There are here three things of great moment, experience, memory, and exigency. There is an original experience in the fellowship of Jesus Christ; there is a deep and tenacious memory in which this experience in a dim and somewhat unconscious way abides; there is the sense of difficulty, immediate, urgent, threatening, through which the word of the Lord is recalled. Experience stands first; next comes memory, the sure but slumbering keeper of experience; in the third place there is the exigency and its awakening call.

It is easy enough to find a parallel to this among our-There was, for example, John Hay, Secretary of selves. He was the political disciple of Abraham Lincoln; he had spent many lofty hours with his great master. These hours are gone, but they have left in his nature a rich deposit of wisdom. That wisdom becomes dim, it is half forgotten, it sinks away out of sight, it seems as if it had never been. But the time comes when John Hay is Secretary of State; then difficulties are an awakening call to his whole being, and through this call comes the remembered wisdom of his master. And here today we have another example. Four great years with their experiences are in the past; this hour is a kind of crisis through which slumbering memories are awakened; and thus the life of these unforgetable college years is present and beating high in your hearts. I wish to show you, if I can, the general relation of your life in college to the life that awaits you in the great and serious world.

1. The primary thing, of course, is some great experience.

If you have missed that the world cannot revive it. Memory is like an electric bell from the interior of your home to the street. The difficulty, the exigency puts its finger upon the bell, the bell sounds its loud call through the entire dwelling, but if no one is in, if the house is vacant, no one can come to the door. If the mind is a vacant house, if it is unoccupied by great experiences, if it has stood untenanted by profound and beautiful thoughts, if nothing high and fine has ever taken place there, the memory may be as quick and efficient as that electric bell, but there can be in the nature of the case no response. If your mind has undergone great things, if your intelligence has been moved in a deep way, if it has received from other maturer, superior intelligences golden words, then when difficulty puts its finger upon the bell, your former wisdom, your previous high passion, your ancient conquering strength will answer the bell.

Experience then is primary, fundamental, essential. That you may recall a sunset and a mountain standing in it and a village sleeping at its base you must first have seen them; that you may remember the murmur of a brook, the song of a bird and the voice of a friend you must have heard them. The dawn that comes up like a transfigured thundercloud in memory came up first through eyes of wonder. things of sense that so touch and color our inward world when they rise in memory, -old faces forever dear, snatches of song floating in the air, an old home standing stoutly in the storm, that patch of green with here and there a wild flower in it, that vagrant cloud with immortal fires consuming it,-rose first through eyes and ears. Nature in memory has as its antecendent nature in sensation. what is true of nature is true of ideas. From nothing can come nothing. The idea in memory has behind it the idea in the intellect and in the heart. The word of the Lord remembered has back of it the word of the Lord in the soul's life.

Your college life has been one great experience. This experience means many things. It means a trained intellect, an intellect quick and exact in observation, clear and sure in inference, swift and sound in judgment, ready and reliable in turing ideas to account. The trained mind is an efficient instrument, like a Damascus blade, like a well-developed athletic body, like any other instrument whose excellent material has been lifted to its best estate. This ready and sure use of the mind is an experience of great moment.

Another is the mass of knowledge acquired during your college course. This does not receive the emphasis from educators that it should receive. The training of the intellect is the main thing; but this training is gained through the acquisition of useful knowledge, knowledge that is a permanent possession and a permanent utility. Four years are a considerable portion of human life, and they should bring to one a considerable treasure of exact and trustworthy information. A man should be able to take for granted that the information gained in college is sound.

Still another experience lies close to the two I have mentioned, and that is the capacity to distinguish between a hazy, uncertain mind upon a given subject and genuine knowledge, between the pretense or the delusion of knowledge and thorough intellectual mastery. This ideal of knowledge is one of the great things that a man wins from his college. Herein examinations have their chief significance. They give magnitude and splendor to the ideal of knowledge, and they register the student's relation to his ideal. Nothing great in the affairs of the intellect is possible, except by accident, without this high severity of the ideal, and without this honest and vigorous examination one can never be sure how one stands toward his ideal. Nothing in college life has a deeper influence upon the future of the college man than his new ideal of knowledge and his new capacity to test honestly his relation to his ideal. Thus the old subjects of human thought are forever renewed in profounder and happier treatment, and provision is thus made for fresh discoveries. Horace Bushnell used to throw aside a poor book on some vital aspect of religion with the remark that he could do better himself upon it. His college ideal and his relation to his ideal gave him that confidence. If we seek the explanation of the immense advance in discovery in the field of natural science during the last fifty years we shall find it here. The ideal that led Newton and Harvey led Darwin and Pasteur. That ideal became part of their intellectual life. And for the general business of living this college experience is of moment. When Paul says: "Of the Jews received I five times forty stripes save one," he gives assurance in that simple phrase, "save one," that he is an educated man, that he is a person of intellectual integrity, that he is a writer with a high ideal of truth. Indeed I have been tempted to conclude, from my knowledge of men, that Paul's ability to qualify a statement for the emotions, so as to bring it into absolute accord with fact, is one of the best witnesses to his intellectual honor. How great a discovery that is in an important writer, in an important and passionate speaker I need not say, or how great a quality this intellectual honor is in any man. In the New Testament we find this great phrase: "God, who cannot lie." That sovereign incapacity must have its basis in the ideal and honor of the Infinite mind.

There are forms of your experience here still more influential. You have discovered your nature through friendship and fellowship in serious work. You have seen the moral ideal look down upon you like the sun shining in its strength upon a world storm-tossed and in wild disorder. You have allowed that light to reveal you to yourself; you have dared to look at your real character, and hear the judgment upon you that you knew to be true. You have had hours when you met God face to face, when you knew that there was laid upon your conscience the burden of the Some secret sin was then surrendered, some hard duty was then accepted, some service essential to some one dependent upon you, hitherto ignored, you then regarded as a privilege, and then your whole nature broke like the morning into splendor and joy. Teachers you have had here whose influence upon you has been great, whose friendship has exalted your existence, whose words have again and again seemed to you the word of the Lord. This is the great deep in your nature, this is the treasure that these four years have gathered in your soul.

How great these experiences are one can measure only as one looks at similar experiences in great souls. In college Emerson was brooding the thoughts that a little later were to be carried on strong wings round the world. Carlyle in Edinburgh went through an experience which he has expressed in the three most powerful chapters in nineteenth century prose, "The Everlasting No", the "Centre of Indifference", and "The Everlasting Yea." That experience held within it Carlyle's whole message to his age. Luther's work for the modern world came from his experience on the Sancta scala at Rome; Augustine could not get away from a few great words in Cicero that he had read, and from the greater words of his teacher. Ambrose; Paul's whole gospel was contained as seed in that momentous experience that he went through on his way to Damascus. Thus we see, in these great examples, the law of all human life. Great experiences of mind, heart, conscience and will are the foundation of great character and great service. Thus we see how momentous are the really great things that have taken place in your lives here. They are part and parcel of your being, bone of your bone, flesh of your flesh; they are your outfit for the future, your resource and strength in the day of trouble. You look at them now as an eagle might look at the eggs in its nest. By and by these mere potentialities will break into life, by and by they will be on the wing and in the air. Experience is the ground and hope of the world. There is but one law here for all human interests. Nothing great can be done or provided for, till we can say of our friends, "As he went on his way the angels of God met him."

II. The great keeper of experience is memory, and I must say a few words about this power. Memory is not a useful power to its possessor if it is detached from insight, imagination, moral feeling and deep human interest. In that case memory becomes simply a beast of burden, like the ox or the ass or the camel that one sees in Oriental lands bearing burdens for others. But when memory is set in the heart of insight, imagination, moral feeling and deep human interests, then its importance cannot be overstated. Then it becomes the condition of all wisdom, all growth, all history; then it throws the shadow of personality backward upon the beginning of conscious life; it becomes the mirror in which you see the figure of your unseen soul. A poor memory is a calamity, no memory means the reduction of mental life to the fleeting sensation of the moment.

A word must be given to the subject of poor memories. They are usually memories for poor things. people who describe their head, by way of apology for their forgetfulness, as like a sieve. The figure is far from complimentary to the moral character of those who use it. A sieve is that through which the grain passes, and in which the chaff remains. There are indeed a great many heads like that. The pearly wisdom, the gleaming truth, the shining thoughts of the world pass through the poor memory, which is a memory for poor things, and the husks, the rubbish, the mere chaff abides. And here we come upon one of the most important laws of the human mind. The secret of a bad memory is shallow interest; the secret of a great memory is love. Take for example a mother, a good, devoted mother. She knows the history of her child to the minutest detail; she remembers every important event in that infant life; she is here conscious of no incapacity to remember. Were she to stimulate recollection she could bring up out of the depths nearly the whole story of that existence. She reads the morning paper and forgets it; she reads a chapter in the Bible and forgets it; she goes to church and forgets what hymns were sung, and very likely the sermon she never even heard. She forgets what she does not care for; what she cares for supremely she cannot forget.

When we speak of our bad memories we need to go deeper; we need to speak of our bad hearts. When we purpose to improve our memories we must begin lower down: we must improve the current of interest, the stream of desire, the tide of affection and love. Here is a ship at sea. You stand on the stern, and for a few hundred yards, you can see the path that the ship has made for herself through the deep. But a mile back there is no trace of your ship; the play of the waves has blotted out all trace of her passage through them. The things that she meets on her course swiftly pass and are lost beneath the horizon; the winds change, the sky changes; everything is changing, nothing abides. But the true navigator keeps a log and everything that concerns the ship is written there; every wind and every change of the wind, every change in the sea, every ship sighted and passed, the whole fortune of his ship in its grand outline is on the captain's log. That log is the memory of the ship, and the memory converts the past into the servant of the future. It is there waiting to be called upon for service. Men pass through a succession of varying and important experiences, and in many cases they pass through them like the ship without a log, and then they blame the constitution of their mind and sigh out their sense of responsibility over their poor memory.

Memory comes up out of love. If the love is deep the memory will be tenacious. The poet Burns reveals this law of our life in one of his songs:

"Still o'er these scenes my memory wakes
And fondly broods with miser care.

Time but the impression stronger makes
As streams their channels deeper wear."

The lover is in his way a miser; he hoards his treasure; he fondly broods upon it; he repeats the beloved experience through memory a thousand times; he keeps the great and beautiful experience forever flowing, and memory the channel of the river, grows deeper and deeper. How can we remember? How can we forget? The great experience is engraven on the palms of our hands. We hold it in our heart. We teach it to our children; we talk of it when we sit in our homes and when we walk abroad, when we lie down and when we rise up. We bind it for a sign upon our hand, we wear it for a frontlet between our eyes, we write it upon the door posts of our houses and upon our gates. Great interests are the foundations of great intellectual life; it is great character that makes great memory.

III. The final element in the typical situation in the text is the sense of difficulty. Peter had heard Jesus speak; the Master's word of wisdom had gone deep into the memory of the disciple, it lay there dim and unaware of itself. Then came the exigency in his life; that exigency and its awakening call brought back the word of the Lord.

This is to be your experience through all the years. There will be the intellectual puzzle. It will sound its perplexity through your whole mind. At first you may stand before it afraid, overpowered. Then as it still keeps its finger on the electric bell, the habit of a trained, tested, and confident intellect will assert itself; the experience of other difficulties met and conquered will rise as from the dead, and like a spirit answer that call. Concentration of intelligence, mastery of a situation, penetration developing through continuous attention, the method and the power of educated reason will rise within you to carry you through this new trial. Not once or twice will that be your experience; it will be the surprise of your whole future that your college years laid in your mind such provision. The exigencies of the coming days are to reveal to you how deep into your intelligence have gone the method and the confidence of reason. For nine years as a young lawyer in Portsmouth Daniel Webster had opposed to him in a succession of To the end of his life important cases Jeremiah Mason. Webster was conscious of what he had gained from Mason. When he stood up against Hayne, against Calhoun, and in the Joseph White murder trial, he met a new exigency which put him in full possession of that great early experience. Mr. Webster has recorded the effect upon him of the challenge of Senator Hayne. It put him in possession of his entire intellectual past. In that vast recovery the method imparted to him in college days was present and the tested knowledge that then entered into his mind. That again is typical. When the stag is brought to bay by the hounds he remembers that he has feet and horns, and when an educated intellect is brought to bay by some serious task, it remembers its power and its resources.

The same law holds when the exigency is moral. Paul relates that he was not disobedient to the heavenly vision. When moral trial came in after life would it not revive the memory of that heavenly vision? The dreams of youth in so far as they are high and serious, in so far as they then control life and begin its transfiguration, return at the call of the moral exigency with their old power. "Here I stand, I can do no other. God help me, Amen." When in after years the great reformer was tempted by a world of moral trial to fall back into the old assent and conformity, that initial experience would return to re-establish his soul. Cromwell asks the question,—"Does once a Christian mean always a Christian?" He adds that he knew that once he was a Christian. What have we here but the working of that early fire among the black thunder clouds of his later years. The old vision of the divine in life and in the universe, the old experience in the strength of which the soul put itself in order still lives in the great deep of memory. Let the moral exigency touch the electric bell, and the alarm will sound through the whole house. Presently a glorious spirit will rise as from the unseen and move in answer to that call.

When the sense of worldliness invades your life, when the love of pleasure is growing into a wild force, when you come to the supreme privileges of mortal existence—to love and marriage and parenthood and are tempted to take them in the cheap way of sordid men, when your classmates begin to fall faster and faster by your side, when you can no longer resist the fact that you are growing old, when the immemorial tradition of human sorrow has become for you a cup of bitterness pressed to your own lips, then on each occasion the glorious dreams that you honored in youth, the ideals that in your college days hung over you brighter than the midnight sky, the experience of God in your soul by which you were able to live the life of a man, will come back to you, as the song birds do in the spring. They will make for you a new world, and they will sing again in a deeper, mellower tone the old songs of the soul in your college days.

Jesus said to his disciples, "Ye shall see the Son of man coming upon the clouds of heaven." What did he mean? The Son of man was in their souls as light, as love and as moral power. He meant that this inward experience stored in memory would, upon the fitting outward appeal, see itself in the clouds of evening. There in those walls of fire, in those pillars and temples of light, in those domes and pinnacles of flame, in those clouds of evening shaping themselves into a city of splendor and peace is the city of the Son of man, the city of God. Up from the deeps within your souls, up from the deeps of youth, as the years come and go, will rise whatever splendors you have seen and known, and upon the heights above you, upon the clouds of evening they will display themselves for your consolation and hope.

When the greatest of all the Hebrew leaders was near his end, and when he wanted to cheer the people whom he was about to leave, he could find nothing better, nothing deeper to say to them than the assurance of the good will of him that dwelt in the bush. That morning vision of God in the burning bush became the evening vision. Thus the beginning returned upon the end to ennoble it and to give it peace. Such is the power of the college experience over the man who has been true to it. It will recur again and again, over the whole course of the years, and when the last mist is in your eyes, the light of great college days, the beauty of this college commencement, the fire of the eternal veritas that then entered your soul will be in the mist; and because of this morning at eventime it shall be light.

BACCALAUREATE HYMN

RICHARD B. GREGG.

(Tune: Integer vitae.)

God of our fathers, God of all creation, Help us in all our life and work for thee, To keep our faith whate'er our task or station, Though we but dimly see.

Lord, when our work seems dull and empty-hearted, Send to us, then, as silently we pray, That hope which leads us through the way uncharted, Cheering our hearts each day.

Father, may all our life be the expression Of what our spirits feel but dimly see, That which we treasure as our best possession, Faith, hope, and love for Thee.

CLASS ORATION

SETH THOMAS GANO.

FELLOW MEMBERS OF THE CLASS OF 1907:

The subject which I have chosen for this occasion is fellowship, because on a man's attitude towards his fellowmen, it seems to me, depends much of what he may be or can hope to become, and in the attitude of men towards each other is the Key to the progress of the world. It is a subject which is of particular significance to us, who have spent four years within these college walls in the closest relationship, and are now about to separate, each to his own life work, and become scattered over the world, never again, probably, to gather together as such a complete and united body as we are to-day.

Fellowship may be considered from two points of view: first, the larger and broader aspect of man's relation to life and the progress of the world; and second, the narrow but more potent and immediate aspect of our relations to each other. Each of these points of view blends insensibly into the other, and in their close union is found the main-spring of human endeavor and achievement, the basic principle upon which the future of every man must rest.

The progress of civilization has been coincident with, and always dependent upon, the growth of social consciousness—the idea of brotherhood, between nations and among the people of these nations. "Man's inhumanity to man" distinguished ancient from modern civilization. In the Dark Ages society was broken up into well-defined groups, between which existed impassable barriers. There was no sense of kinship between nations, or even between different portions of the same nation. It was when these nations were awakened to a sense of their kinship with others, and of their social responsibility towards their people, that the way was prepared for the greatest bound forward in the advance of civilization that the world has ever known. We to-day are witnesses of the potency of the spirit of brotherhood in a nation by the example of Japan, which, under its influence has advanced to a place beside the foremost nations of the world.

The spread of education means the advance of civilization, in that it brings men to realize more distinctly their relations to their fellow men and their dependence on them. So the spread of education has carried with it the tendency towards the democratic ideal of equality of opportunity, and is a powerful force working for the ultimate unity of the world.

In the relation of man to life and its problems, the sense of fellowship is of still greater individual importance. day we stand upon the threshold of life, and look out upon it with uncertain vision. We know not what good or ill fortune may attend us, whether we shall succeed or fail. Hand in hand, shoulder to shoulder, we have worked and played together these four years, and what is the result? One thing we must have learned—love for our fellows. of the most tangible things in college life is the friendships created, and to many of us, these friendships are among our most priceless possessions. The donor of the Harvard. Union said at its dedication: "Looking back in life I can see no earthly good which has come to me, so sweet, so uplifting, so consoling, as the friendships of the men and women I have known well and loved." We have, in our four years together here, made many friendships which shall remain a boon to us through life.

But if in the creation of these ties we have not learned the larger meaning of friendship, if we have not seen in these a symbol of the brotherhood of man, we have missed the enduring blessing to be derived from them. Close friendship is necessarily restricted to a few, but the sense of fellowship should extend further, and include the multitude, and it is from this conception of our relations to others that we shall perform the great services of life. Our attitude towards others is at the foundation of our character and manhood. "A man's heart," says a prominent Harvard graduate, "is of greater worth than his house." One can interpret life in terms of intellect and get truth; in terms of dollars, and become rich; but it is only when a man learns to interpret life in terms of the heart that he knows the joy which comes to one who sees clearly the essentials of life, and the exultation of one who can rise to the sublimest heights and be thus enabled to perform the greatest services to his fellow men.

The sense of fellowship begets the social responsibility which is necessary in solving the problems before us to-day. In the space of half a century, progress has received an impetus unparalleled in history. Mark Twain says, "We are on the march, but at present we are only just getting started." We see millions of foreigners flocking to our shores, and crowding still closer the overcrowded cities. Socialism, which up to the present has been only an unpleasant dream, has now become a reality which must be faced. The problems which arise from these conditions can only be solved by devotion to the cause of moral and social progress, and by that appreciation of our social responsibility, which a true sense of fellowship inculcates.

Again, the growth of the idea of fellowship means the widening of the mental horizon, the enlargement of human endeavor, the extension of the doctrine of human sympathy. A man who works for himself alone must do so with the knowledge that his efforts end with his life, but a man who works for others, does it with the sublime consciousness that his work must live after him. Our great university testifies to the lasting influence of those who thought of others and not of their own material well-being; men who, imbued with the spirit of love for their fellow men, have cheerfully poured forth their services and their wealth for the eternal betterment of mankind. This hall in which we are assembled is a monument to the devotion and heroic self-abnegation of those men who gave their lives for the maintenance of their respective unions, and by their blood cemented the two unions into one, a living testimony to the fellowship of humanity.

The time is coming, and is now come, when greatness shall be measured not by the power or wealth or lineage a man possesses, but by what he has done for others. The field of history, when rightly interpreted, teaches us how to mould our thoughts and actions so as to make them consonant not only with the age in which we live but with the generations which shall come after us. Men are slowly coming to realize their real place in the totality of human endeavor, to see that they are "the sum of a series of actions linked with all that has gone before upon this earth." It is the sense of his fellowship with all men which leads man to assume this new attitude, and which enables him to divine his true place in the natural world. When this more inclusive aspect of fellowship comes home with convincing force to every human being, the wasteful friction of human forces which now impedes the wheels of progress will be abolished, the world will recognize its essential oneness, and the true fellowship of man will be an accomplished fact.

Let us, then, take to heart the lesson of fellowship which our four years here have taught us, and go forth accepting it as one of the prime requisites of manhood. Thereby we shall attain more nearly to the standard of truth which is always before us; we shall avoid that neutrality which spells ignorance or mediocrity, and inspire others with the spirit we have here imbibed. We shall have faith in men, sympathy for others and confidence in ourselves. We shall be able to apply the principles we have learned here, to estimate our own true place in life, and find ourselves in line with the increasing unity of mankind.

And, in after years, as we gather here from long partings, and look into the eyes of our class-mates, each shall see in the other that same enthusiasm for life which he had in youth; the bright gleam in the eye which denotes escape from the apathy of age; and the sense of kinship with others which denotes nobility of mind and heart. The warm hand-clasp, the affectionate greeting, shall bear witness that we are bound together then as we are to-day, by the eternal and immutable bonds of fellowship. And we shall have learned the lesson which the poet taught:

"Tis not the love we get, but what we give Which leaves glad memories for the coming years."

CLASS POEM

HERMAN HAGEDORN, JR.

There's trampling of hoofs in the busy street,
There's clanking of sabres on floor and stair,
There's sound of restless, hurrying feet,
Of voices that whisper, of lips that entreat,—
Will they live, will they die, will they strive, will they dare?
The houses are garlanded, flags flutter gay,
For a troop of the Guard rides forth to-day.

Oh, the troopers will ride and their hearts will leap,
When it's shoulder to shoulder and friend to friend—
But it's some to the pinnacle, some to the deep,
And some in the glow of their strength to sleep,
And for all it's a fight to the tale's far end.
And it's each to his goal, nor turn nor sway,
When the troop of the Guard rides forth to-day.

The dawn is upon us, the pale light speeds

To the zenith with glamour and golden dart.

On, up! Boot and saddle! Give spurs to your steeds!

There's a city beleaguered that cries for men's deeds,

With the pain of the world in its cavernous heart.

Ours be the triumph! Humanity calls!

Life's not a dream in the clover!

On to the walls, on to the walls,

On to the walls, and over!

The wine is spent, the tale is spun, The revelry of youth is done. The horses prance, the bridles clink, While maidens fair in bright array With us the last sweet goblet drink,

HARVARD, 1907—CLASS REPORT

Then bid us, "Mount and ride away!"
Into the dawn, we ride, we ride,
Fellow and fellow, side by side;
Galloping over the field and hill,
Over the marshland, stalwart still,
Into the forest's shadowy hush
Where spectres walk in sunless day,
And in dark pool and branch and bush
The treacherous will o' the wisp lights play.
Out of the wood 'neath the risen sun,
Weary we gallop, one and one,
To a richer hope and a stronger foe
And a hotter fight in the fields below—
Each man his own slave, each his lord,
For the golden spurs and the victor's sword!

Friends of the great, the high, the perilous years, Upon the brink of mighty things we stand— Of golden harvests and of silver tears, And griefs and pleasures that like grains of sand Gleam in the hour-glass, yield their place and die. Like a dark sea our lives before us lie, And we, like divers o'er a pearl-strewn deep, Stand yet an instant in the warm, young sun, Plunge, and are gone, And over pearl and diver the restless breakers sweep. On to the quest! To-day In joyful revelry we still may play With the last golden phantoms of dead years; Hearing above the stir, The old protecting music in our ears Of fluttering pinions and the voice of her, The Mighty Mother, watching o'er her sons. To-day we still may crouch beneath her wings, Dreaming of unimagined things; To-morrow we are part Of the world's depthless palpitating heart, One with the living, striving millions

CLASS POEM

Whose lives beat out the ceaseless, rhythmic song
Of joy and pain and peace and love and wrong.
We may not dwell on solitary heights.
There is a force that draws men breast to breast
In the hot swirl of never-ending fights;
When man—enriched, despoiled, oppressed,
By the great titans of the earth who hold
The nations in their hands as boys a swallow's nest—
Leaps from the sodden mass through loves and feuds
And tumult of hot strife and tempest blast,
Until he stands, free of the depths at last,
A titan in his turn, to mould
The pliable clay of the world's multitudes.

An anxious generation sends us forth On the far conquest of the thrones of might. From west and east, from south and north, Earth's children, weary-eyed from too much light, Cry from their dream-forsaken vales of pain, "Give us our gods, give us our gods again!" A lofty and relentless century, Gazing with Argus eyes, Has pierced the very inmost halls of faith; And left no shelter whither man may flee From the cold storms of night and lovelessness and death. Old gods have fallen and the new must rise! Out of the dust of doubt and broken creeds, The sons of those who cast men's idols low Must build up for a hungry people's needs New gods, new hopes, new strength to toil and grow; Knowing that nought that ever lived can die,— No act, no dream but spreads its sails, sublime, Sweeping across the visible seas of time Into the treasure-haven of eternity.

The portals are open, the white road leads Through thicket and garden, o'er stone and sod.
On, up! Boot and saddle! Give spurs to your steeds!

IVY ORATION

DANIEL WILLARD STREETER.

If you have tears—and are determined to shed them—spill them sparsely—drop them coyly; for I come to praise the Class of 1907—not to bury it. At last the day has come when we may boast to our hearts' content. No longer do we tremble at the thought of our paltry grades interred in the dusty tomes of the college office. They are meaningless hieroglyphics now. Such earthly things should be far from your minds when you gaze with growing admiration on the real article—fresh and shining from the mint—the superlative—subtle—sagacious Seniors.

Long ago—in our salad days—when we were barbaric Freshmen—O! But before I begin to gossip I have a sorry piece of news to divulge.—You may doubt it—but during the small hours of the morning—in fact while the Boy Orator was dishing out his button busters in Sanders Theatre—the Sanctuary known as the College office was broken into and robbed—actually plundered. Among the things 340 degrees were taken.

Immediately after the discovery of this wanton abstraction of temperature—this lifting of type, ink and parchment, there was a meeting of all the Boards of the University—the Adminstrative Board—the Parietal Board—the Board on Admission—the Board on Dismission—in fact, when the roll was called, it was dicovered that there were present 13 Boards and 4 Splinters. Quite a trim little lumber pile—a few thousand feet Board measure—but not a sound top knot in the lot.

Since all the degrees were gone-what could they give the Seniors to show that they had really graduated? The Board pondered a movement—then rose in a cloud of sawdust and declared that the only thing to do was to give each Senior a sign off slip made out for life. This is a bitter blow to the Recorder and present Freshman class for next year the scarcity of sign off slips will enable students to take vacations only in case of sickness.

Alas! The good old days when we could rub soap in our eyes and sign off for pink eye are gone! The old order changeth yielding place to new diseases,—instead of primitive gastritis we now have appendicitis and are punched and prodded until we are forced to confess that while we are really sick—we are only sick of work.

Even though the good old days have disappeared it is refreshing to note that the whole-hearted, generous spirit of the Undergraduate body has suffered no change. That they take a lively interest in the welfare of others is clearly shown by their recent unsolicited donation to our contemporary stage. They saw that the Drama needed encouragement—and that the fruit business was slack. A double barreled charity presented itself; they bought 450 lemons and with feverish generosity presented them to the overwhelmed actors. We have had many interesting periods of History, of which the Reign of Terror is not the least,—but History has yet to reveal a period produced by the same motives and as fruitful as the Reign of Lemons.

Many changes have taken place during the last four years. No longer is John the Orange Man a visible factor in our Athletics. Latest reports rumor that he is at present Head Picker of the largest Orange Plantation in Paradise. He sits in a large morris chair—for as soon as he picks one orange another immediately takes its place. Occasionally he rises and leads a long cheer for Harvard—the Oranges respond with—peals of silence. The only fly in his amber is when now and again a spiteful wind envelopes him in a cloud of Yale sand.

We have had many notables to cheer us on our way during the past year—Among others an unpronounceable Russian

IVY ORATION

Revolutionist, who made a speech in the Union and asked: "How long have we got to live trodden down by a scrofulous aristocracy?" Our class President—for the moment terror stricken and giddy—replied that if he referred to the Faculty, about two months more.

President Roosevelt also "Warbled a few wood notes wild" to the great relish of the young idea. The Athletic Committee were not present, however. They were busy in yonder barren field beating the Foot Ball Question into kindling wood and constructing from the debris a new game to take its place that will make "button—button—whose got the button" look like a criminal and inordinate rough house.

Among the events on which the University is to be congratulated is the completed addition of the new butler's pantry to Gore Hall. Our new gym is also a truly marvelous piece of work, while modesty alone forbids us to more than mention our recent victory in the later collegiate games. In view of this progress it is pathetic to note that the poor old Dental School still continues its hand to mouth existence.

It is the custom in most Ivy Orations to make flippant remarks about the verdant sprig of ivy. Let us be wise, however, or rather other-wise. Let us turn from the defunct and deficit past with its unpaid bills to the blushing future with its unlimited credit.

From the capricious Freshman with his budding mustachios to the purblind Senior with his hoary locks, this is a day of promise. The Freshman is promising weird-looking people "that he will pay up in the fall," while the Senior is promising some flushed and nervous maiden that he has left frivolity behind him and is about to enter that rigid monastery known as the outer world. There clad in a hair shirt he will wander bare-footed through the silent cloisters, and instead of tea and muffins of an afternoon he will mortify his flesh with red hot pincers.

We entered 4 years ago as callow youths—mere—unsophisticated striplings—while today Nature stands agog and the economic world is convulsed as we shake out our gaudy plumage and prepare for our first flight.

HARVARD, 1907 — CLASS REPORT

The Political machine rumbles ominously.—The beautiful dragon beleaguered damsel thrills to the approach of a gallant rescue—Molly Coddles rush to the citron orchards—Even the Stock Market is inclined to be bearish—Teddy Bearish in fact.

The stillness that always precedes an epoch-making event is in the air. The Class of 1907 has reached the crest of the hill and is unwinding its glistening coils before casting itself like an anaconda upon its unsuspecting prey.

Oh happy anaconda! Governed solely by brute instinct, a doubt as to what constitutes your legitimate prey never enters your head.

Oh hapless, highly organized Seniors! Subtle psychology has been our undoing; our very polish is our menace; too much learning hath made us so mad that we are confused in our minds as to what constitutes our proper victim. We avoid the stupid oyster and decide that the gaudy pheasant is for us. However, when we grab wildly and the bird disappears leaving only its tail feathers in our grasp we turn to the oyster with quickened interest. The oyster may be dull but it is the only thing we can catch, so we begin to respect it. Even if we are forced to practice on oysters in the beginning we smile to think where we shall end after we have jauntily tested our prowess.

Some of us have builded better than we knew during our four college years, while others owing to the interference of Unions and labor troubles have not got our foundations laid yet. There are those among us who can take the nine parts of speech and tie them into knots that would give Houdini a brain storm; they can juggle adjectives in one hand and write "thank-you notes" in indirect discourse with the other. Again, others have jammed encyclopedias under their scalps. They have been gourmands at the feast and acquired literary dyspepsia. Their sulphur and treacle consists of so many printed pages three times a day with a little Schopenhauer and water as a treat if they are good. Some of us even after having had our brains massaged every day for four years belong mentally to the Oleagenous Period. We have come to the conclusion that Miocene Apes did not not have such a bad time—for nothing was expected of them.

Lastly, we come to that seraphic body whose main acquisition during our struggle together has been an appetite for oyster crabs and vintage Burgundy. To this happy cluster of Bacchanalians we owe much. Their throaty lyrics echoing among our sombre walls give us a sense of security, for as we turn down the wick of the lamp containing the midnight oil we realize that some of us at least are not mere puppets in a vast vacuum of knowledge.

Even if our tastes are so widely different there is one thing we Seniors have in common—our caps and gowns. When we don these wrappers we all look as like as so many cigars in a box and the irony of it all lies in the fact that the worst scamp may be taken for the most sanctimonious—you can't distinguish the Cremo from the Havana Perfecto.

This is also one of the beauties of it. Four years tumbled together in such a seething cauldron as college, is a long time and it is a miracle if in the course of this violent contact we have not bumped the rough corners off each other. Indeed some of us may have become so well rounded and highly polished that as soon as we strike some slight incline we will roll silently away and disappear. The corners are only partly worn off others of us so that we have to be pushed down hill.

For the most part, however, we have lived through our growing pains. Our juvenile sailor suits have been cast aside. We have donned the Toga, and are now open to offers of pecuniary interest. We should like positions of trust with easy hours, large salaries and three months off in the summer—but we will take—any old thing.

We are about to hang our harps on the willows and take up practical piano tuning. Ahead lies the long and dusty road beaten hard by the feet of those who have gone before. Behind, we hear the laughter of those who follow. We are silent as we notice how far the milestones are apart and how few oases there are to be seen. With never a turn or bend our road stretches far, far ahead into a strange new land. Dim in the distance lie the foothills.—Scarcely visible on the horizon are the mountain peaks. We pause a moment and wonder before we wave "good-bye" to those behind us. Already we taste the dust of the plain—and this leads me, as the most fitting thing I can suggest in a prohibition Town, to wish you in a metaphorical glass of figurative rare old wine, —Health—Success—and Happiness while on the road!

CLASS ODE

WILDER GOODWIN.

Old friends we must part for the hour has come
When separate far we must dwell,
The lips that have smiled and the voice that has cheered
Now falter in saying: "farewell!"
Yet the joy that abides in the heart of the past
Shall have power to conquer the sigh,
And the gladness that greeted our gathering here
Breathes its benison o'er our goodbye.

Though our ways may fare forth to the ends of the earth,
Youth's memories never shall fail,
These four years of friendship shall strengthen and guide,
Their hallowed tradition prevail.
Let the bonds that have held us through glad student years
Hold us firmly through years yet to be,
Though divided by Destiny, parted by Fate.
Yet united, dear Harvard, in thee.

LATIN ORATION

DE VITA PRO CETERIS AGENDA.

SAMUEL HART NEWHALL.

Amici omnes qui hodie theatrum hunc concelebratis, vel amicitia vel artium amore liberalium inducti, vos omnes saluto.

Te quoque, praeses noster, qui omnibus hominum ordinibus semper consulis, et operis et pecuniosis, cuius sententiam et opinionem postulant omnes et venerantur, qui vitam ad lucem sapientiae et veritatis tradendam dedicavisti, et huc magnitudinis hanc nostram universitatem adduxisti, te praesertim iubeo salvere.

Et tv, huius universitatis alumnus disertissimus, miles vitam militarem dilexisti, militis virtutis et honestatis exemplar fuisti, civis et gubernator virtutem et iustotiam semper ad bonum omnium adhibes, et manu tam firma gubernator nostrae civitatis tractas, his causis omnibus accipe plurimam salutem.

Tibi vero haud minus, iure omnium gentium peritissimo, quod tam praeclare et dilucide Americanam rem publicam intellexisti, quod domi civibus tuis tam egregie servivisti, quod foris nunc et regis et totius regni tam honeste vice fungeris, perlibenter dico salutem.

Tv quoque, litteris omnino perfusus, qui auctor magna cum dulcedine, magna cum sapientia scribis, qui apud nos tam diligenter, tam bene patriae tuae servis legatus, accipe salutem.

Et tibi, qui iuris consultus illustrissimus adeptus es tantum honoris, qui res militares tam insignite animo comprehendisti, qui pacatae rei publicae studiose consulis, dico salutem.

Et te, dux insignis navium, qui summum ad montem sancti Eliae, intima Boreae in frigora penetrabilia penetravisti, maxima cum gratulatione saluto.

HARVARD, 1907—CLASS REPORT

Nec non vos socii inspectoresque qui tanta cum cura nobis semper subsidiis consulitis ivbeo salvere.

Professores magistrique, robur nostrae universitatis et firmamentum, qui ad omnes homines instituendos et erudiendos vos dedidistis, salvete quoque. Et quod omnibus in rebus, non in studiis modo amici fuistis nobis, semper benigne, semper diligenter et hortantes nos et adiuvantes, gratias vobis agimus permagnas.

Et Decani, pro humanitate, pro cura, pro tam multis in nos meritis maximas vobis gratias omnes et agere et habere debemus.

Et alumni, eiusdem matris filii majores, vobis omnibus libenter dico salutem. Nec noli te fratres, graves inter vitae labores, homines minus disciplina fortunatos et iuvare et hortari.

Patres matresque qui tam laeti advenistis quod posthac sumus nos non consumpturi pecuniam sed facturi, adeste animis benignis, et si Anglicam praefertis Latinae linguae, mox habebitis satietatem.

Et candidae puellae, prohibet infelix modestia quominus omnino incognitis dicam vobis "salvete." Vobis tamen de pulchritudine gratulor, de sapientia, de comitate. Sed vos, si Latine me loqui piget non dissimulate vexationem timoris causa, nam scite viros omnes approbare antiquum illud, "Non sit doctissima coniunx."

Nunc tandem, condiscipuli mei, veram accipite salutem. Habemus hodie apud nos exempla praeclara vitae illius quae maxime est expetenda. Vitam quidem dico quae utilis est nobis ipsis, amicis nostris et generi hominum universo. Ita teneamus hunc cursum omnem per vitam ut unus quisque nostrum vere dicat, "Homo sum, humani nil a me alienum puto."

DISSERTATION

THE JEW IN AMERICA.

ARTHUR LOEB MAYER.

In an address to the Jewish congregation at Newport, George Washington wrote: "The citizens of the United States have a right to applaud themselves for having given to mankind examples of an enlarged and liberal policy." These words true in 1790 have become even truer as the years have passed by, and to-day the proudest tradition of our history is the spirit of toleration and of fair play, which has dominated the character of our people and the councils of our Nation.

With over a million strangers a year seeking these shores we are confronted with a complex new problem, but in solving it we may safely rely upon that old spirit. I can deal to-day with only one of the many peoples who are seeking America's protection. My theme is the Jewish immigrant; and I would show you that he has been no parasite or alien in this fair land, but as to him the wisdom of the founders stands approved.

Two hundred and fifty years have passed, since the Pilgrim fathers of my people sailed up New Amsterdam's broad bay. They came as did your ancestors only thirty-five years before, in search of liberty of conscience and a life of self-respect. From the hounding of the ghetto and the torture of the rack they fled across the strange waters to find peace after the travail of the centuries.

The scattered settlements of those early days have multiplied and been united into this strong Rpublic. The handful of hardy pioneers has given way to a busy nation of eighty million. The idle ports are grown

"insolent with keels.

The stithies roar and the mills thrum with energy and achievement."

And in all this marvelous transformation the part of the Jew has never been denied. But is must be emphasized more and still more that his services have not been solely materialistic. In the fields of public life, of science, art, literature he has played a worthy part. As early as 1722 a Jew occupied a chair in this University, as early as 1737 a Jew was elected to public office. When the first organized resistance to British encroachments was framed in the Non-Importation Resolutions, nine Jews were among the signers. Next to Robert Morris, Haym Solomon was the most liberal contributor to Revolutionary funds; and in the field the Jews supplied more than their quota of fighters. The first call for an abolition party was the work of five men, four of whom were Jews. When war became inevitable eight thousand Jews responded to the call. "There were no more patriotic men to be found in the country" said Major Gen. Howard in speaking of "The lie that the Jew will not fight for his country has done its work long and faithfully," wrote Mark Twain, "it ought to be pensioned off now and retired." Indeed as every man among us is a better citizen for his devotion to Harvard, so is every Jew a better American for pride in his race and its traditions.

We look about us to-day. Strauss has been called to the Cabinet, Rayner in the Senate serves the people, Gompers stands at the head of the army of labor, Damrosch has given a life to the advancement of music, Harvard has recognized the services of Jacobi and Flexner in medicine, Jacques Loeb ranks among our foremost scientists, Felix Adler has enriched the nation in many fields.

So the list runs on interminably. Not that a single Jew has ever done more than his duty to the first nation to welcome his people! Some indeed have been a power of evil instead of good. But as a race we believe that we have not shirked our responsibilities; and that the Jew has shown that he is no foreign adventurer, no man without a country and incapable of citizenship, but an integral part of this nation, bone of its bone, and flesh of its flesh. We claim the proud distinction of American citizenship, not as a matter of favor or of grace, but as a right won by services, sacrifices, where needs be by blood. We, whose fathers so early found a refuge in this republic, we, to whom it has given more than to any other stock, we, who thrill with love at the sound of its name or the sight of its banner, we proclaim it our country, as well as that of any earlier or later comers; and in the glory and strength of our title appeal to you for our brethren in distress.

From Kief and Kisheneff they come, with haggard, careworn faces, the terror light agleaming in their eyes and on their backs "the burden of the world." Will you bid them return to that hell of persecution whence they fled or will you hold the wide gates open, help "to make right the memorial infamies," rebuild in them "the music and the dream."

The task, gentlemen is not hopeless. Neither age or suffering has made the stock degenerate. Their longevity is greater than that of any other element in New York city's cosmopolitan population. Ninety-five per cent of those who receive charitable aid, in a reasonable time, become self supporting. They have the lowest record for serious crime of any people in the United States. Drunkenness among them is at a minimum. If they have any passion it is for education. Indeed their worst trait is their craving for the great cities where their children may obtain that prize, but where they swarm in squalor and in filth. To offset this tendency, the Territorolist Association has been organized to guide immigrants directly to Southern ports, the Industrial Removal Office is distributing more and more artisans throughout the smaller towns, while the Baron de Hirsch fund has enabled over ten thousand Jewish immigrants to return to the agricultural and pastoral life, their forefathers led.

Thus and in many other ways are we shouldering the burdens of this immigration, and we are confident that our labors will not be in vain that the Nation, which grants these strangers "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" will not be disappointed in them. For theirs is a blood-red lineage. Far back in the dawn of history, when the great races of past and present were staggering in sensuality and bloodshed, they gave the world its greatest literature, they gave the world its spiritual and ethical ideals. Their oppression has stretched two thousand years and for two thousand years has this battered people illumined every field of man's activity. Poets like Heine and Halevy, philosophers like Maimonedes and Spinoza, economists like Ricardo and Marx, musicians like Mendelssohn and Rubinstein, novelists like Auerbach and Zangwill, statemen such as D'Israeli and Gambettathese bespeak the promise of the race. In the sunlight of freedom, into what new powers may they not blossom, what laurels may they not lay at the feet of America!

We prate of the spirit of democracy in which this Country was created, we boast of the square deal policy which guides it; but the inner justification of democracy and of the square deal must ever be a belief in the brotherhood of man. In the recognition of that brotherhood we ask your aid, Men of Harvard, to keep open our ports of promise to every healthy, industrious immigrant, who seeks them as a haven from the storm of persecution. We ask you this, and in return we Jews, we Americans, we stand as pledge for this strange people. Grant us your patience, your forbearance, and we promise that the bread ye cast upon the waters will return to you a hundred fold.
